

Meta, Springfield, NE

These bi-winged creatures are often found in rural areas, where there is no need to hide. Always in two, creating an internal streetscape.

These bi-winged creatures, often found in rural areas, where there is no need to hide, are the Guardians of the Expanse. Always in two, they create an internal streetscape, a long corridor that is not a public way but a private artery of pure information.

Their form is a function of their solitude. In the quiet of the countryside, they have shed the mask of the city, their true nature laid bare. The central "spine" of the H is not a bridge but the meaty tissue, connecting a circulatory system of information. This streetscape is a ritual space, where the machines display to their human occupants their warm countenance.

The wings are their twin lungs, inhaling power and exhaling heat, a metabolic rhythm that sustains the digital life within. They are the Librarians of the Endless Scroll.

Revision #3

Created 15 September 2025 13:11:37 by Max

Updated 15 September 2025 17:04:17 by Max